Brad Levien has been practicing in the litigation field since 1995 and joined the firm in 2003. He sees clients as “partners” in litigation, and establishes communication early in the case to address all concerns and goals.

He has handled all types of tort defense matters at all phases for both insurance companies and self-insureds. Over the past ten years, he has developed a subspecialty in the defense of retail, restaurant and hospitality clients. He has represented these national companies in the areas of general liability, commercial and landlord-tenant litigation, and also in the regulatory areas. He has been particularly successful in the prosecution and defense of cases involving indemnification agreements, additional insured clauses and coverage disputes.

Currently residing on Long Island, in Bellmore, Mr. Levien is married with two daughters. He enjoys golf, tennis, the National Football League (and, sadly, the New York Jets).
